

Seeing Yourself on the Opportunity Site: Participant Survey

Reflecting the City of Brooklyn Center's commitment to development that benefits all residents, the following options are adapted from the Equitable Development Principles and Scorecard.

Check the options that are most important to you.

1. How could you see yourself living here?

- Housing units that are long term/permanently affordable to low income households.
- Housing is energy efficient and free from environmental hazards.
- Housing is near amenities (health and social services, transportation, education, and quality job opportunities) that promote walkability, livability, and community.
- Housing is mixed income, with different levels of affordability integrated.
- Displacement prevention strategies are in place to reduce risk of gentrification.
- Housing unit type reflects community's need, based on household type, size, and life stage.

What else could make this a place to see yourself living?

2. How could you see yourself feeling welcome and safe here?

- Safe, attractive, and convenient access to pedestrian, bicycle, and transit systems.
- Ability to walk, bike, or ride transit to jobs, education, cultural resources, and shopping.
- Convenient parking facilities, including accommodation of bicycle and pedestrian access.
- Attractive, comfortable, accessible transit facilities are available.
- Presence of wayfinding and systems information for all modes.
- Development promotes traffic calming and pedestrian safety.
- Accessible to all abilities by the incorporation of Universal Design.
- Design and development reflect distinct identities of local cultural heritage.

What else could make this a place to see yourself feeling welcome and safe?

3. How could you see yourself working, shopping, or doing business here?

- Opportunities are created to promote local small business and entrepreneurial activities.
- High quality businesses owned by people of color are created to sustain a strong economic base and provide job opportunities to the local workforce.
- Lease agreements prioritize neighborhood business opportunities.
- Project helps works through partners to connect residents and businesses to project construction jobs, contracting opportunities, and long-term employment within the project.

What else could make this a place to see yourself working, shopping, or doing business?

4. How could you see yourself relaxing, recreating, gathering, and having fun here?

- Development is environmentally friendly, green, and sustainable in design
- Impacts on environmental health, economic prosperity, and social vitality are assessed
- People-focused design is walkable and bikeable
- Development includes streetscaping, public space, and green space

What else could make this a place to see yourself relaxing, recreating, gathering, and having fun?

5. What else do you want to see here? What are we missing?